A feature which proved of great value was "The State by Counties," in which the advantages of each county were set forth by competent resident writers. The Intelligencer has well define ideas as to this forthcoming edition; but it wants to make the publication as good as it can be made, and therefore will welcome any suggestion from anybody who thinks he has a good idea. This is easy to foresee that this action will cause many complications in the politics of that year.

A convention consiting of one delegate from each State will be held February 22, 1892, to fix the time for hold ing a nominating convention, and both the Democratic and Republican parties will esgerly watch all subsequent proceedings, with a view to observing the strength developed by the young party and shaping their own course accord-

Judging from the figure the Alliance vote cut in certain Western States last fal, it would seem, at first glance, that the greatest inroads would be made upon the Republican party. However, it must be remembered that at present, the Farmers' Alliance is strongest in the South-in States where Democrats hold sway. It is not likely that the Farmers party will increase rapidly in the North-ern States.

There does not seem to be a disposi tion among the tillers of the soil in the North to break away from their old parties and adopt the visionary theories advocated by many State organizations the Alliance, while in the South there is a restlessness among the farmers, which the Alliance has been quick to take ad-1 25 vantage of.

The platform adopted by the Omah convention will be alow to commend itself to the farmers of the East and North, particularly those of Republican antecedents. It declares in favor of the abolition of national banks and of the free and unlimited coinage of silver, and demands that all paper money be placed on an equality with gold. It also tavors the impractical scheme of the Government lending money on landed security which is in effect a plan to tax all the people to lend money to one class.
